

finished product for which we have no customer. In this way we have problems. Obviously, if the match does come off, with a forecasted order becoming a real order,

The order for the product and the product itself should arrive at the shipping dock at the same time.